Reflections on our Assembly

Continuing from last month's newsletter, I invite you to read the final two reflections from our Synod Assembly in May.

Eliminate Term Limits: We considered a constitutional amendment that eliminated term limits for synod vice president and secretary. While a majority supported the amendment, it did not receive the two thirds necessary for adoption. Some lay the amendment's defeat at my feet because of the way I structured the assembly; they contend that, if this vote happened after the elections (where in some cases we still needed nominations) and Vice President Schlesinger's very excellent report, it would've passed overwhelmingly.

I heard two "worst case scenarios" as reasons we need term limits. The first is that it would be possible for someone to be elected at 21 and to serve until he or she is 95 and we need a mechanism beyond elections to prevent this from happening. I hear a form of this argument from congregational leaders who determine their pastor—who has neither terms nor limits – stayed too long and they want a mechanism that forces the pastor to move on without them having to tell him so. I learned how powerfully elections serve as term limits in 2013, when a very popular presiding bishop stood for a third term and Bishop Eaton was elected.

The second "worst case scenario" I heard is that, without term limits, we won't seek nominees. Truth be told, under Pastor Timm's leadership, we are working to make nominations more transparent and inclusive. Compared to other synods, our nomination process has room to grow so that it revolves less around personal relationships and connections by giving every congregation an opportunity to lift up gifted leaders.

Our officers play a very strong role in leading our synod. The vice president leads the synod council by setting the tone and agenda, and chairs the executive committee as the synod's HR team. The secretary holds both the council and staff accountable to the directions set and the tasks undertaken through her keeping of minutes and other records. In synods without such leadership, the bishop and staff has more to do. My worry is losing wise and gifted leadership at a critical time for no reason other than it is term limited.

Both during assembly and in the weeks since, many people have reached out to me to ask if we could reconsider this next year. Some asked if we could increase the number of terms from two terms to four. Knowing that good ideas involving change are rarely received when first suggested, I suspect we will talk about this again in 2018.

Future Assemblies: We work hard to respond to people's hopes and desires for synod assembly. This year included an Opening and Closing Eucharist, two keynote addresses, and opportunities for learning. A few have asked about the possibility of a one-day or biennial assembly. Both are possible; other synods have attempted each. In 2018, we are contracted to be in Lansing and Presiding Bishop Elizabeth Eaton will be with us. In 2019, we have a bishop's election. While a bishop would be delighted to be reelected on the first ballot, making a one-day assembly possible, planning for such an outcome by scheduling a one-day assembly would be ruled "out of order." So 2020 is our first opportunity to try a one-day assembly or to omit it altogether. This gives us plenty of time to consider and plan.

While he was with us, Bishop Erwin quipped that bishops like to see synod assembly through the rear view mirror. That's true in terms of the planning that goes into them and the chances that the wheels are going to fall off. But in terms of being church together, I've become a real fan. So thanks to everyone who came to assembly and thank you for whatever role you played.

The Rev. Craig Alan Satterlee, Ph.D., Bishop

Healthy Boundaries

We live everyday with boundaries and rules. When we drive they keep us and others safe. We make promises and set boundaries with our spouse on the day of our marriage. We set boundaries for our children to keep them safe and to teach them to grow into the adults we dream they can be. Boundaries are the way we live. In Martin Luther's three uses of the "law" he said that one use is to "keep order".

For rostered ministers and for leaders in the church, there are boundaries for being safe, for protecting relationships, and for providing examples for living in a Christian Community. At the constituting assembly of the ELCA in the fall of 1987, a resolution was passed to require boundaries training for all rostered ministers in the church. For those of you who remember back to that time, clergy misconduct was being uncovered and there were expensive lawsuits against denominations across the country, and the world.

Those early boundary training were legalistic and shocking for many. For others, who had witness or experienced misconduct by clergy, they were a welcome relief. For some they were even "too little, too late". Over the years we have progressed. There are about thirty of us across the ELCA who have been trained to present boundaries for the church. Now as Pastor Rosanne Anderson and I teach boundaries around the synod and across the ELCA we are interested in the sharing of best practices; how do you keep yourself safe and how do you provide a safe atmosphere in the congregation and community to foster mission and ministry where you serve.

The world is changing. When I went to my first boundary training the internet had not reached congregations yet, there were no online dating sites, and the only mobile phones were installed in cars. Now a major portion of conversations at boundaries training is about social media, the internet, cell phones and emerging technology. We recently had a boundary issue that involved Skype. There is a core group of us across the ELCA that met recently to continue to talk about emerging issues in keep boundaries in church and the rostered minister's personal and professional life. The ELCA now recommends that rostered ministers attend a boundaries training at least every 3 years. We are also seeking to connect with the Episcopal Church for teaching Safeguarding God's Children and Safeguarding God's people. Lay leaders in the church are welcome to attend boundaries training both to assist the rostered minister in keeping safe and in keeping boundaries among the laity in the church.
