Andrew R. Lorenzen-Strait

Director of Children and Family Services

Andrew Lorenzen-Strait joined Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service (LIRS) in June 2019, as the Director for Family and Children Services. Lorenzen-Strait leads a dynamic team that develops and operates programs, practices, and policies that are driven by the guiding principal that unaccompanied children are children first and foremost, and their unique needs and vulnerabilities must be addressed in the context of their best interests. Lorenzen-Strait oversees a national network of both faith-based and non-profit partners that ensure child placements (inclusive of shelter services, foster care and Unaccompanied Refugee Minors (URM) programming) are safe, appropriate, in the least restrictive setting, and are in full compliance with all agreements, policies, and procedures with the U.S. governmental entities. Lorenzen-Strait also manages the LIRS family reunification network, that strives to reunite families as timely as possible with community-based case management and post-release support services that facilitate the healthy and safe integration of children back into their families and communities.

Prior to LIRS, Lorenzen-Strait served as the country's first national migrant Public Advocate within the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) under President Obama. As the Public Advocate, he served as an ombudsman for the migrant population encountering the U.S. immigration enforcement system, addressing their concerns and ensuring they had a voice in the development of policies and programs. During his tenure at DHS, Lorenzen-Strait launched a new alternative to detention program for U.S. asylum seekers working with LIRS and other civil society partners. Launched in January 2016, the Family Case Management Program (FCMP) tested whether providing access to holistic community-based services for eligible families released from DHS custody can serve to mitigate flight risk and promote compliance with immigration obligations. FCMP was an outstanding success, providing an over 99 percent compliance rate, and more importantly, allowed families to pursue their asylum relief out of detention and free from the fears of family separation. Although prematurely terminated in 2018, Lorenzen-Strait's leadership in initiating and leading this program demonstrates what government and civil society can accomplish when they work in concert to explore and deploy pioneering practices to aid asylum seekers.

Lorenzen-Strait, a licensed child-advocate attorney, started his Federal Government service in 2003, first as a Presidential Management Fellow for the U.S. Department and Justice and then in 2008, as a Senior Advisor, Public Advocate, and Deputy Assistant Director for DHS, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement. At DHS ICE, Lorenzen-Strait led humanitarian programming in the areas of: LGBTIQ+ care, language access, religious services, legal access, mental health care, disability accommodation, segregation oversight, parental rights, and trauma-informed care.

Mr. Lorenzen-Strait holds a Bachelor of Arts in political science from the University of California at Irvine, a Juris Doctorate with an emphasis in child advocacy from Whittier Law School, and a Certificate in National Security Leadership and Decision-Making from the U.S. National Defense University. In 2007, Lorenzen-Strait was named the Maryland Attorney of the Year for Pro Bono Service for his work with Community Legal Services of Prince George's County and he continues to volunteer as a Maryland Court-Appointed Special Advocate for children with medical complexities and those who identify as LGBTIQ+. He is a member of the both the Maryland State Bar Association and the U.S. Supreme Court Bar.
